

WHY POLITICAL SCIENCE AT ALGOMA U

Whether you know it or not, we all participate in politics. If you are interested in a future career in law, activism, government or public service at the (local, national, or global level), journalism and media, the foreign diplomatic service, academics or the private sector, then Political Science is for you! A degree in Political Science -- a social science -- opens the door to a myriad of career paths. Politics is much more than simply voting in an election or working in government. Reading or listening to the news, making donations to aid groups, or talking with friends and families about social issues are other ways in which politics works into our everyday lives. Thus, by studying political science, students will have a deeper and more thorough understanding of the political forces and institutions that directly affect their lives. Plus, you will be able to make more informed decisions when it comes to election time. Aside from learning about political systems and governance, students will also be exposed to a variety of other courses, including those in philosophy, law and justice, and history. Students will develop skills sought after in a variety of career paths, including those outside of politics. Critical thinking, writing, research, and presentation skills are just a few of the skills students will perfect in this holistic and interdisciplinary program, all of which are highly transferable. Algoma University's four-year Bachelor of Arts in Political Science degree focuses on three areas of study: Canadian politics, public policy and government; comparative politics and international relations; and political theory, philosophy, and economy.

COURSE HIGHLIGHTS

Our program also works to incorporate Indigenous and Aboriginal content, ideas, and methodology in its approach. The program will help students to understand and identify important institutions, forces, and ideas that shape society. Students will gain an understanding of the history, values, structures, and processes of political systems, and will study the principles of effective democratic citizenship from local to international levels, along with the relationships between states and non-state actors in the wider, interdependent global system and how they organize themselves into various decision making and administrative forums. A degree in political science will teach students how to systematically, rigorously, and analytically evaluate competing explanations of the same event or phenomenon, and gain an understanding of who or what exerts power.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

- Understand, evaluate and use a variety of theoretical and methodological approaches to study legal events and phenomena, past and present.
- Identify and explain core principles of law (Canadian public, private, and Aboriginal, international, and comparative) and legal institutions.
- Be aware of the learning process, the benefits of lifelong learning, and the complexity of knowledge.
- Communicate effectively orally and in writing using different media and technologies.
- Employ effective deliberative and discursive techniques in problem solving, decision-making, and conflict resolution.
- Apply these principles, concepts, and skills in diverse settings.

WHY STUDY AT ALGOMA U IN SAULT STE. MARIE?

Algoma U is located in Sault Ste. Marie, a city of 75,000 people in Northern Ontario. "The Soo", as locals call it, has all the amenities of a big city – shopping, entertainment, sports teams, festivals, and cultural activities – but without the hassle of traffic. We're lucky enough to live in a city surrounded by the great outdoors. With Lake Superior and the St. Mary's River literally just steps from our front door, there's always something to do. You can catch some sun at the beach or walk our beautiful boardwalk. With the highest elevation in Ontario, Searchmont Resort is a popular winter destination for our students, offering great alpine skiing and snowboarding.
